Cincinnati Enquirer May Only Take Vote On Scripps Purchase

By a WALL STREET JOURNAL Staff Reporter

CINCINNATI — A Federal judge ruled the Cincinnati Enquirer can hold a special meeting today, but delayed further action on a proposed agreement for the company to buy the 60% interest in it held by the E. W. Scripps Co.

Judge David S. Porter ruled on two minority shareholder suits that sought to block the purchase.

The judge ordered that votes can be taken and the results announced, but that further action on the agreement couldn't be taken at this time.
